FAIR TULLYTOWN HUNTER GIVES MOST VIVID IMPRESSION OF HER FIRST OPPORTUNITY TO SHOOT AT A MOOSE ON THE GASPE PENINSULA

Trek Afoot Took Group Through Delightful Country — 12 Days Spent in the Interior Brought Many New Experiences to Mrs. Horace Burton

Mrs. Horace Burton, Tullytown, herewith relates her thrills and experiences as she faced a moose for the first time in the Canadian woods:

By Alice W. Burton

My third hunting trip in Canada was a walking test. To reach our destination—fifty miles into the interior of the Gaspé peninsula, Quebec—we labored for six days nearly all the time foot.

Along with my husband and myself went two guides, a cook and two teamsters. On the way in we camped at nights in tents and finally we arrived at a log cabin, located beside a babbling brook. The half-acre clearing composing our permanent camping site was bathed in sunshine and warmth nearly all daylight October hours we spent there, while protecting hills rose high on the cold north and west sides of the place. The densely packed spruce trees hemmed us in from all sides with a coloring of always restful shades of black and gray and green. The trees though very old were slender, tall and perfect.

In our cabin we had a large stove, a table and a bench. The bed was fastened in one corner and was made of small logs with fresh odoriferous spruce boughs for a mattress, over which were spread our six layers of Hudson's Bay blankets.

All our meals were cooked over an open fire and eaten out of doors if the weather was not too cold. For breakfast we usually ate beans and bacon, cereal and stewed prunes—or apples; for lunch—if out hunting, canned corned beef and cheese with bread and preserves, for the evening meal, stewed partridge with brown gravy or perhaps fried tenderloin of moose with potatoes, and for nearly every meal, tea.

We were in the interior twelve days, we had lots of excitement, many new experiences, wonderful walks of from six to eight miles every day, and we shot plenty of partridges and saw much big game.

Suppose I tell you now about my last day's hunt from the cabin:

Starting off at about 8 a. m. just Guide Will Eden and I went together. The morning was frosty and the moss crunched under our feet as we stepped along the trail. The sun was shining cheerfully, but it was only here and there that it really got a chance to shine directly on us. The path we were following was a jolly rambling one winding through the wonderful woods and hills. The first bit of excitement (Continued on Page 4)

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

(With "MERRY")

Best Christmas wishes are best expressed in useful gifts. We all like to receive things that we can use and enjoy day by day. That's just the reason I chose a magazine rack for Betty in her new home. Spencer's have them in numerous styles. There are some with two compartments, others with four; some with hard handles and others with grasping places that are a little lower. Then, too, they're all so rich-looking. The one I have at home now for Betty's Christmas is of walnut, with four compartments, and on the side is a design in gay colors. I'll warn anyone who goes to Spencer's store, especially at this season, to go early, for they will consume more time than they anticipated, if they are like me and just can't go out without stopping to examine the gay-colored throw rugs in rectangular, oval and round shapes.

Aunt Mary says that when it comes to prompt and efficient service the Bristol Trust Company has it to dispense. And I'll back her up in that every time; for, yesterday I went to the Trust Company's office to cash Aunt's Christmas Club check for her, and I didn't have to wait an instant. And as I paid her first deposit on the club for next year, I couldn't help but marvel again at the efficiency of the workers, and the little ways in which they try to please.

For the little seamstress, Norman's Stationery Store, 416 Mill street, has an ideal gift. The boxed articles include a small doll, about four inches high; a complete set of clothing, including dresses, rompers, etc., all ready to be cut out and sewed by the little one who likes to ply the needle, embroidery floss, and hoops. I had wanted something of this kind for little Frances, but didn't imagine I would be able to find a gift box so complete. That little girl will just sew now to her heart's content, and Christmas will last for weeks into the New Year. While I was in Norman's I decided to lay in a supply of Christmas cards, tags, seals and ribbon, for with my shopping coming along in such a swift manner, I'll soon be ready to start the wrapping process.

Philco radios seemed to be so popular among Bristol folks that one decision I made this week was to stop at the Bristol Radio Shop, Mill street, and hear for myself a more or less lengthy program. My first surprise and pleasure was in the varied selection of cabinet models—with their fine woods and attractive styles. But my surprise was greater when a program of music came through with such clearness and richness. I have heard much about the Philcos, all the way from the tiny models to the more expensive ones, and everyone who has heard them seems to be so pleased. But yesterday I found out for myself. And Dad had just better keep tomorrow evening free from engagements, for he's going to pay a visit to the Bristol Philco dealer, and I'm taking him.

An Appeal to Those Who Have

AN appeal to those who have more of this world's material wealth than some others who today find themselves in need of aid and assistance during times of stress and adversity is made by the Central Charity Committee of Bristol.

It is the object of the Central Charity Committee to raise a fund of at least $2,000, the money to be used to aid those unfortunates in Bristol who do not have any church or fraternal organization affiliations.

Those who are affiliated with the Central Committee anticipate that there will be considerable demand this winter upon the treasury of the organization, and for this reason it is their desire that sufficient funds be on hand to assist those who are proven worthy and in need.

Since the organization of the Central Charity Committee here the funds have been provided by a small coterie of individuals who have always made it their business to see that no worthy case was neglected and that those who really needed assistance and who were not in a position to get it from any other source, were given the help which was needed, and which would carry them through until such time as those who had met with adversity were able to support themselves.

It is the business and responsibility of everyone in the community who can, to aid those in this borough who are in need. It is not the responsibility of a few but the obligation of the many who have a sufficient amount of material things of the world and are in a position to share them with the less fortunate.

There are many in Bristol who can and should aid the unfortunate of the borough. If every individual resident here will contribute unstintingly to the fund of the Central Charity Committee, there will be plenty with which to give sustenance to that group of folks who can neither call upon church or organization for aid in the emergency.

It is merely a question of the individual feeling his or her own responsibility in the matter. Sometimes those who have never met with misfortune and who have never known what it is to want for food, clothing and fuel, forget to think of those who are suffering because of the lack of such things. Stop and think! Ponder upon the individual debt you owe to your fellow beings. Then make a contribution to the Central Charity Committee. Make it as generous as you can. Give just a little more than you think you are able to. Deny yourself so that you can give, and the blessing of such a gift will be more than can be measured by any material yardstick.

Send or take your contribution to Thomas Scott, treasurer of Central Charity Committee of Bristol Borough, at the Farmers National Bank.

Officers Are Installed By Bucks Salon 74

With Mrs. J. G. Brodbeck, state president of the S. N. 40 Societe, in attendance, the installation of officers of Bucks County Salon, 74, took place in the home of Robert W. Bracken Post, American Legion, here, last evening.

The state president took charge of the installation ceremony, and turned the gavel over to Mrs. Thomas B. Longhurst, newly-elected head of the Bucks County Salon.

Mrs. Brodbeck addressed the group, congratulating them upon the welfare work being carried out in this section, and asking that each member strive for the growth of the organization, numerically and otherwise.

A report of the pouvoir session, which took place in Philadelphia on November 15th, was given by Mrs. Longhurst.

A lunch was served to the women at the conclusion of the business meeting. Next meeting is to take place in Langhorne on Wednesday evening, January 14th.

COURT TELLS DE CARO TO LEAVE COUNTY

Bristol Man Is Refused New Trial; Fined $10 and Costs

SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 11.—James DeCaro, Bristol, who was refused a new trial this week on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, was fined $10 and costs and ordered to get out of Bucks county. A prison sentence of one year was suspended.

The twelfth motorist charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor in the last eight days was before the court yesterday when William J. Lodge, of Philadelphia, salesman for a well-known manufacturing concern, pleaded guilty before President Judge Hiram H. Keller and was fined $200 and costs.

Lodge was arrested on the Lincoln Highway near Janney by a State Patrol officer. He told the court that he had taken a small drink of whiskey, a glass of beer and a "hot dog" before he left home for a ride. Dr. J. Fred Wagner, of Bristol, who examined Lodge, testified that he found the man unfit to operate an automobile because of his drunken condition.

Judge Keller told the defendant in pronouncing sentence that it pays to tell the truth and admit the truth rather than go on the witness stand as some defendants do and say they were not drinking. His admission of the offense saved Lodge a prison sentence, the court intimated.

SCOUT TROOP 5 MEETS TONIGHT

An interesting meeting of Scouts of Troop 5 will be held this evening at 7:30 in their quarters, Watson's garage building, Farragut avenue. Scoutmaster Berry requests a full attendance of members and would appreciate a visit from parents and friends of the boys so that they can see for themselves just what the officers are doing for their sons. Interesting speakers have been engaged to address the Scouts at future meetings, and a program of interesting events throughout the winter months is being mapped out.

HERE AND THERE THRUOUT BUCKS COUNTY

Two persons were injured and two automobiles were destroyed by flames on Tuesday night after three cars had figured in a crash on the Doylestown Road, near Newtown.

The injured persons are Lydia Kalkbrenner, 14 years old, of Lahaska, Pa., riding in a car driven by her mother, Mrs. Elsie Kalkbrenner, 38 years old, and Franklin Briggs, proprietor of a large farm implement store at Woodbourne, near Langhorne.

Constable William Strading, of 125 East Centre street, Morrisville, was driving toward Newtown, as was Mrs. Kalkbrenner, Briggs, with Walter Miller, secretary of the Middletown Township School Board, was en route to Doylestown.

The burned cars were owned by Mrs. Kalkbrenner and Briggs. Newtown firemen were called, but were unable to save the cars. The victims were treated by Dr. E. J. Parker and Dr. Henry Lovett, Corporal J. T. Budhas, of the Langhorne State Highway Patrol, investigated.

Poultrymen of Bucks County organized the Bucks County Poultry Association at a meeting held in the grand jury room at the court house.

$2,000 IS GOAL SET; MONEY TO AID WORTHY POOR

All Contributions Are to Be Announced Through The Local Press

URGE ALL TO ASSIST

Donations to Be Given to Thomas Scott, Treasurer, Farmers Bank

It was decided at a meeting of the Central Charity Committee held last night to open a campaign to raise a fund of at least $2,000.

The money is to be collected through voluntary contributions and every individual in the community is asked to respond at once to the appeal. A request is also made to make the donations as large as possible as the committee anticipates an unusual demand during the coming winter.

The contributions are to be given to Thomas Scott, treasurer, Central Charity Committee. Mr. Scott is at the Farmers National Bank and will be glad to receive all donations. The contributions will be acknowledged through the local press by publishing the names of the donors and the amount of their contribution.

There were about 30 representatives of the various organizations and groups affiliated with the Central Charity Committee, at the meeting which was held last night in the community house.

The purpose of the meeting was outlined by Clifford L. Anderson, chairman of the committee. Mr. Anderson stated that in view of the general depression throughout the United States and Europe and which to a somewhat lesser degree than in the larger communities, had caused need for assistance in Bristol, that a meeting of the committee had been called to discuss ways and means of raising funds with which to meet the emergency.

The purpose of the Central Charity Committee, the chairman stated, is to act as a clearing house for cases which need assistance and to give aid to those who are without church or fraternal organization affiliation.

In most cases the churches and fraternal organizations take care of their own, but there are always some in times of distress who are without any outside affiliation and it is these which the Central Committee, has to provide for.

Mr. Anderson made it emphatic that every organization dispensing charity in Bristol should report the cases thus aided to the Central Committee, so as to avoid duplication.

"While our funds have at times been low yet they have always been ample," said Mr. Anderson, "to take care of the needs."

"This winter, however, we feel that the demands are going to be greater and consequently we will need more funds."

Thomas Scott, secretary and treasurer, read the report for the past year which showed that about five people had contributed the entire funds dispensed by the committee during the past 12 months.

This report showed a balance on hand of $215.72 and that 31 cases had been assisted. Milk had been supplied to three cases, 61 orders were given for groceries, 14 orders for coal, one case was supplied with a nurse and one case was sent to an institution.

Joseph R. Grundy commented upon the work which had been accomplished and stated that he had just returned from a tour of the State in connection (Continued on Page 4)

TO JOIN LIFT SPAN OF BRIDGE TODAY

Structure Across Delaware Is Considered About 85% Completed

OTHER WORK IS SLOW

McClintic-Marshall, contractors for the Burlington-Bristol bridge, across the Delaware River, here, expect to close the center span of the structure today.

The closing of the span, however, does not mean that the bridge is anywhere near completed. There still remains much work to be done. The work yet to be completed is of a tedious nature and progress will not show to such good advantage to the eye of the casual observer.

Much riveting will have to be done, tool house erected, machinery house and administrative quarters are all still to be completed. The flooring of the center span is yet to be laid. This flooring is of steel plates while the flooring of the remaining portion of the span is concrete and most of it is in.

The job as a whole is about 85 percent completed and it is anticipated that the entire structure will be finished about February 1st.

The approach on the New Jersey side is done with the exception of the grade crossing over the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad. This crossing has not been placed yet due to the fact that the P. R. does not desire to open a grade crossing at this point until such time as the bridge is ready to be placed in use.

Progress is being made on the approach on this side and the stretch of soggy ground found on a portion of the roadway is being filled and rolled.

ADMIT THREE CANDIDATES

Three candidates were mentioned for Boy Scout Troop which met in St. James's parish house Monday evening. Included in the evening's program was a practice of first aid by the patrols, and short drill. The troop now has openings for several new members; and any desiring to join are asked to interview the Scoutmaster. The members of the troop were also reminded of registration.

Were You A Victim?

By "The Stroller"

A few days ago two flapperish looking girls dropped into town and began a solicitation for subscriptions to magazines. They were pretty, they were winsome and they had a good line.

The price of a year's subscription was first three dollars, but if the fair ones found they could not inveigle this amount from the pockets of the prospects they would take as low as a quarter.

Several young men subscribed and it is reported that the pair took quite a sum out of Bristol. All are still awaiting receipt of the magazine but only one chap has thus far heard. He received a note informing him that if he would send along 75 cents to add to the quarter he had already paid, the magazine would be sent to him for a limited time.

BENSALEM STUDENTS HEAR EAST INDIAN

Mr. Darwhani Lectures About His Country and Its People

OTHER SCHOOL NOTES

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP SCHOOL, CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, DEC. 11

—On Saturday afternoon the students of the high school received a treat when they were able to listen to Mr. Darwhani, an East Indian lecturer. Mr. Darwhani spoke about his native land and explained to the students the class distinction in India. There are four classes of people in India and the speaker told of the characteristics and modes of living. Mr. Darwhani told of his travels across Europe before he came to United States and gave many interesting and humorous accounts of happenings while on the boat over the Atlantic Ocean bound for New York City. Then he told of his first glimpse of a snow fall and explained that to him the snow looked like sugar sprinkled over the whole city.

CONVALESCENT HOME APPEALS FOR FUNDS

Reviews Work It Is Doing to Aid Children of Section

A WORTHY CHARITY

LANGHORNE, Dec. 11.—Many requests have come to the Philadelphia Convalescent Home for Children from hospitals and other places for children needing convalescent care. A mother was recently admitted to a nearby hospital for an operation, and with her were two children, both awaiting operations. While the little family was at the hospital a constable levied on their household goods for rent owing the landlord. There is no money to send the children away for convalescent care after leaving the hospital.

Another case that made a strong appeal is a baby named "Lord." He received treatment at the Ocean City Seashore Home for Babies last summer and was greatly benefited by the season at the shore. His mother writes that he is very much in need of convalescent care again. The father and mother are both out of work, and are unable to buy milk for the child.

"It was two thousand years ago that the Christ Child was born in a manger because there was no room at the inn," says Mrs. Julia Hazard, a director of the home, "and there is still no place to send babies in need of convalescent care as the general public has not yet awakened to the importance of helping along such a work. The Lord Jesus said: 'Whosoever receiveth one of these little ones, receiveth Me.'"

Because of the crying need the Home is circulating the following letter:

"Dear friend: "The glad Christmas season is now at hand, and it is a fitting time to (Continued on Page 6)

HIGHER LIVING STANDARDS

The Carnegie endowment for international peace finds the standard of living among the working classes of Europe is higher than before the war. The improvement, it is pointed out, is not because of the war but in spite of it. It has been brought about largely by better business methods, increased technical skill, mass production and scientific management. These Europe has learned from America.

There have been contributing causes, including various forms of social insurance, better educational facilities, shorter working hours, improved housing, better health standards and the like. But these would not have been possible without the better business methods and other industrial advances.

All is not yet well in Europe by far. There are still many idle factories and mines and hundreds of thousands of idle workers. But some measure of prosperity has been restored and the governments are becoming increasingly stable.

It has been said that conditions in Europe have improved not because of the war but in spite of it. It can also be said with equal truth that they have improved not because of socialism and communism but in spite of them. One of the effects of the improvement has been vastly decreased interest in socialism. Experience has exploded the theories of Marx and today only fanatics and those who want to make idleness honorable cling to the old Marxian dogma of a working class sinking deeper and deeper into destitution and servitude.

American workers long ago learned what their European brothers only now realize. That neither capital nor labor can triumph at the expense of the other. Perhaps this accounts for the higher living standard of American working classes.

WHO WANTS IMMUNITY

Four out of five have it, say tooth paste manufacturers.

Four out of five get it from kissing, say scientists and hygienists.

Four out of five don't care if they get it, if immunity is to be had only at the cost of total osculatory abstinence.

What a dreadful thing this habit of kissing is! And how hard it is for scientists and hygienists to convince addicts of the dangers they incur!

How blissful was the ignorance of those who kissed freely before a German professor discovered that four out of five persons with pyorrhea contract it through kissing. And they will keep right on kissing freely and blissfully though the dangers and terrors of osculation be multiplied and magnified a thousand times.

If the spread of this dread scourge is to be checked it will not be by the quarantine method. The transmission of germs by labial contact is no new theory; the human race has often been warned of it. Yet are kisses less freely bestowed today than they once were? There are no statistics to prove it.

Short history of war making: Bull, bully, bullet.

One way to make matrimonial bonds safe would be to provide sinking fund.

EXPERT URGES COMMON SENSE IN THE ENJOYMENT OF SPORT OF SWIMMING

Editor's Note: There is probably no one in this country fitter to speak with more authority on exercise than Arthur A. McGovern. Thousands of men and women have been instructed in physical training by Mr. McGovern in his capacity as director of a famous New York gymnasium.

By Arthur A. McGovern

Written expressly for I. N. S.
(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Once you have conquered fear of the water and mastered the art of a perfect swimming stroke, you will find nothing more exhilarating, refreshing and stimulating, than a good swim.

Swimming has become one of the most popular of all summer diversions, as witness the crowds that throng every beach on week-ends and holidays during warm weather—and all winter resorts emphasize the perfection of their bathing facilities as a chief attraction. From the standpoint of good health, there's no question about the many benefits to be derived from this form of recreation, since it enables one to take advantage of the fresh air and sunshine in addition to providing exceptionally good exercise. So healthful is this great outdoor sport that it is certainly a shame that most people do not use it intelligently.

The average day at the beach begins with an early morning rush—often a train trip of several miles in an overheated, crowded car. The first sight of the ocean induces an immediate plunge into the surf, and after fifteen or twenty minutes frolic in the water, the swimmer will usually loiter about in the sand in a wet bathing suit, repeating the routine three or four times during the course of the day. Luncheon ordinarily consists of a combination of indigestible concoctions such as hot dogs and coffee, or heavy sandwiches and a bottle of pop. In spite of the almost universal knowledge that exercise immediately after eating is dangerous, I have seen countless swimmers dash into the water as soon as they have swallowed the last mouthful and in this we have the reason for frequent attacks of cramps so familiar to many swimmers.

Much has been said in recent years about the merits of the sunbath and it is, without question, one of the finest of all tonics provided by Nature. But it can be carried to extremes, and after a day at the beach in which the body has been constantly exposed to the sun's rays, men and women who believe they are improving their health will return to their homes to suffer for several days from a sickeningly painful sunburn.

In applying common sense to your beach parties you need not sacrifice any of the real enjoyment they offer, but you can add untold benefits to your health. More than that, Monday morning will find you refreshed and stimulated rather than suffering from the fatigue which is the inevitable aftermath of a too strenuous week-end.

On the first day of your swimming season you must exercise special care not to undertake too much. Later, as you accustom yourself to the exercise and sun exposure you can gradually increase the amount of activity. At first, however, half an hour is long enough for a sun-bath, and if you want to spend the entire day at the beach, protect yourself from the sun with a shade or robe. Again, don't spend too long a time in the water. Thirty minutes is all the average person should allow himself—more may be detrimental to his health.

Most important of all—don't lie around on the sand in a wet bathing suit. You may not feel cold and your suit is soon dry, but remember that the natural heat of your body plays an important part in this drying process and in so doing saps vital energy and leaves a feeling of exhaustion. It's rather ridiculous, when you stop to think about it, to sit in wet clothes and a bottle of pop. In spite of the almost universal knowledge that exercise immediately after eating is dangerous, I have seen countless swimmers dash into the water as soon as they have swallowed the last mouthful and in this we have the reason for frequent attacks of cramps so familiar to many swimmers.

The midday meal should come in for careful consideration. Fruit of any kind is always desirable and while satisfying the appetite will not give one the uncomfortable sensation that follows a hearty meal. Milk, water or orange juice are just as refreshing and far more healthful than carbonated sodas.

After your luncheon lie down in some shady spot for at least two hours. This rest after eating is far more important on a hot summer day than at any other time although it is a good practice to follow at all times.

Keep in mind that your holidays should be periods of relaxation whether spent on a sunny beach, or in the quiet of your own home. When these days of rest from ordinary routine are spent in too strenuous activities or sports indulged in without regard for their effect upon the health, then the time which we expected would be of great benefit will instead bring us more harm than good.

Here and There In Bucks County Towns

day night. All jobless residents will be invited to register themselves with Secretary W. B. Rosenberger of the business men's organization, with data respecting trades or occupations, age and their dependents, if any. Business men and citizens generally needing help will be asked to co-operate with the bureau.

Every dollar contributed this year for Perkasie's customary community Christmas celebration will be devoted to charity.

Ornamental standards, much like those of Lansdale, for Perkasie's initial White Way illumination experiment on Fifth street from Park avenue to the Sellersville borough boundary, will cost approximately $2000, according to designs and estimates submitted to Perkasie Council, Tuesday night, by the Graybar Electric Company. Property owners are to pay a considerable portion of the bill. A contract for standards and installation probably will be awarded at the next councilmanic session.

Without a dissenting voice, Council passed on final reading an ordinance virtually outlawing all sorts of dangerous pyrotechnics in Perkasie Borough. The measure prohibits the "manufacture, sale or exposure for sale of fireworks" in so far as the pub-

Fair Tullytown Hunter Gives Most Vivid Impressions

We encountered was the track of a large moose. The guide declared it had passed that way that morning. I clutched my rifle a little tighter and peered through the trees more intently and rounded curves more cautiously and stepped a little lighter, full of expectancy for some time after that.

We had gone about a mile further on when I saw coming over the rise of a little hill in front of me a funny waddling black animal about the size of a small pig, only he apparently had no legs—just toes peeping out from his thick fur. He stopped as soon as he saw me and waited. I knew he was a porcupine—he was very black with but a touch of gray and brown. We stood and watched him for a while and presently he came on and I began to feel rather uncomfortable, but to my amazement he turned and started to climb a tall slender spruce tree. Steadily up he climbed, clasping the trunk with his little paws looking now more like a baby bear. He wasn't satisfied just climbing out of our reach—he climbed to the very top. The guide showed me how well the porcupine can hang on by rocking the tree violently back and forth, but the animal held fast.

We continued our walking and with every turn of the path new and delightful scenes met our eyes. We came to an area which had been burned over several years previously so that here the trees were smaller and not so close together. They sat around in delightful little clusters, each tree about the size of a very large Christmas tree. In between the trees the ground was covered with white caribou moss about three inches high and everywhere through this was showing the brilliant red leaves of the blueberry bushes, turned thus by the frost. All of which made a scene of rare beauty.

We stopped several times to rest and to pick particularly large and sweet clusters of blueberries or just to listen. At intervals the guide raised his birch bark horn and howled through it challengingly endeavoring to call out to view a bull moose. But we continued our way and always the quietness and beauty of the great wood filled us with peace.

We finally came to a river. The path led down close to the water and it was a beautiful path with the sun slanting in through the trees and I wanted to follow it on and on. We saw many moose tracks some new and some old. Two times the guide suggested that we turn back for fear I wouldn't be able to walk home but each time I insisted that we continue.

Finally in his turn my guide felt compelled to say: "Mrs. Burton, do you think you could go just a little further, this seems to be such a likely spot and over behind that hill are good grazing grounds for moose," so we kept on. We had gone now a little over four miles. We came to a rise in the path several feet above the river. Here the guide gave another of his male moose calls and almost immediately with his keen ear he heard an answer. So we waited and listened and rested.

In about ten minutes I saw a dark object running through the trees and shrubbery on the other side of the river directly opposite to us. I motioned to the guide and he too caught a glimpse of it.

"Did you see any horns?" he asked. But I hadn't.

Now I must explain to you that for two weeks previous to this day I had been receiving instructions on how to shoot my big game rifle. I had been pointing at distant stumps and rocks and other objects and pulling blank triggers and practicing in general so that when the psychological moment arrived I would not be found wanting. So now, while we waited, I turned my safety catch off and clicked my set trigger. That simply means to fix the rifle so that the regular trigger will shoot by merely touching it.

About that time the guide, looking up the river, said, "There he is!"

I looked and there on the opposite river bank, standing in all his majesty, head up, listening, looking, stood the largest moose I have ever seen. The sun shone on his beautiful tan coat and antlers.

The guide suggested in whispers that we get a little nearer so we stepped cautiously up the path several yards until we were almost opposite the moose; he was about 60 safe yards away from the shallow Salmon River between us.

The location was ideal, the visibility good, the game large—the guides would start totting the meat home tomorrow, I said to myself, as I raised my rifle. I had always wondered what my reaction would be when I actually had the opportunity to shoot big game and, surprising to myself as well as to others, no doubt, I did very much want that moose.

"Take careful aim behind the fore shoulder," came the guide's warning. I placed my rifle to my shoulder. I looked down the barrel, yes, there was the moose at the other end. But I must get a fine sight, I must find the very bottom of the notch, so my instructions had been. I must find not only the moose, I must locate his heart.

So intent was I in carrying out my instructions that when unexpectedly I heard a tremendous report and felt something strike my shoulder it took me several seconds to realize what had happened. I can remember coming out of my daze and saying, "Oh, why my gun went off."

I looked towards the moose and there he was still—he had neither run away nor dropped dead. Now I was becoming normal again. I realized what had happened; I had touched the delicate hair trigger before I was ready and the report that followed had frightened me.

Suddenly I realized I should shoot again, so I "repeated" my rifle—how kind it was of the moose to wait—and replaced the gun to my shoulder, looked down the barrel—but—the moose was disappearing into the tall timber beyond. The moose had come to before I had.

I couldn't believe I'd missed this first chance I really ever had to shoot big game—how silly my excuse would sound about a hair trigger. Of course I could shoot a moose—hadn't I shot fifteen partridges with a 22 rifle since coming into the woods!

I was very miserable. How, when back at the cabin, could I explain to my husband who was so anxious for me to shoot big game? I told the guide to build me a lean to right there and I would remain in the woods!

Of course he laughed at this—then, further elucidating about the game, said, "There is good grazing ground across the river a short way but that moose isn't stopping to feed, he's running yet!"

When finally, I did get back to camp—late that day—my husband listened patiently to the whole story then quietly asked, "When you were aiming with a loaded rifle and you heard a loud report did you think you were reaching your Sunday School class or sitting in the movies?"

with making a survey on unemployment and what can be done to decrease it. This committee is working under the direction of Governor-elect Pinchot.

Mr. Grundy said that nowhere throughout the state had he found an organization provided to care for the charity needs of the community and which exists in Bristol.

"We have a good system here and the workers, Miss Jones and Walter F. Leedom, are an efficient combination and are outstanding in their activity."

On motion of Arthur P. Brady a request was made of the local press that they open their columns to an appeal and publicity in connection with a drive for funds.

Anthony Russo reviewed the work of the Italian Welfare Association and was complimented upon its success. Mr. Leedom stated that all Italian cases are taken care of by the Association which Mr. Russo heads.

"We simply report them to Mr. Russo and he does the rest," said Mr. Leedom.

Mrs. Mary E. Ancker, Mrs. Mary Kraft and others spoke of the necessity for funds and suggested ways and means of raising them.

Thomas E. Coe, Jr., cashier of the bank, speaking for the Board of Directors, expresses the following views: "The vital part of a bank is its vaults. Therein are stored not only the records and monies of the bank itself, but also the valuable possessions of safe deposit box customers, which we consider more important than the bank's cash. Therefore, in view of the many hold-ups and robberies that are occurring at the present time, every consideration has been given to the safety and security of our vaults as well as providing a night depository for the protection of our customers, who ordinarily were forced to hold overnight or holidays, large sums of cash.

"Not satisfied with our already strong and substantial vault, a contract was made with the O. B. McClintock Co., the largest bank vault burglar alarm manufacturers in the world, to electrically protect our vaults.

"The entire surface of the walls, ceiling and floors are to be surrounded with electrically sensitive protection. The vault door is protected against attack of any kind.

"Any attack made on the vaults of this bank will immediately cause an alarm from the heavy gong installed in its electrically-protected housing on the outside of the building; any attempt to cut wires, or destroy or silence this gong will at once cause the alarm to sound.

"Our night depository enables our merchants and other business customers to deposit their late receipts at any time during the afternoon or evening. The after hour depository is made of heavy steel, embedded in concrete reinforced with steel rods. The depository is further protected with complete electrical protection with connection to the bank's burglar alarm system."

A representative of the O. B. McClintock Co. will be at the bank on Friday evening to demonstrate the system to customers who would care to have the system explained by the company's expert.

HIGH SCHOOL QUINTET WILL OPEN THE SEASON

The Bristol High quintet will endeavor to win its first victory of the season on foreign soil, when it journeys to Hamilton, N. J., to play the latter's high school.

For the ensuing season Manager Charles Hendricks and Assistant Manager Louis Nicholas, have scheduled 18 games in all, among which are some of the strongest cage teams in Bucks and the surrounding counties. New Jersey Institute for the Deaf, Langhorne, Morrisville, Bensalem, and the Alumni, the greatest game of the season.

As yet Coach Townsend is undecided as to what the starting line-up will be.

When Mr. Darwani showed the way a turban is wrapped in the different sections of his country. It was rather amusing to see the yards upon yards of silk used in wrapping one of these foreign headresses.

The regular meeting of the Bensalem Township High School Athletic Association took place on Friday. The meeting was called to order by President Henry Bowman, and the regular business was transacted. Special business was attended to concerning the election of cheer leaders for the coming basketball season. The ones receiving this honorable position are: Henry Bowman, Francis Williams, both seniors; Miss Alma MacKenzie and Harry J. Seltzer, sophomores.

The senior library club is working on several scrap books which will be presented to children in homes and hospitals. This work is under the supervision of Miss Emilie Schroeder and Miss Frances Simons.

There is a contest being staged by the Lincoln Library at Bensalem. The contest deals with thirty questions, and the one who answers the questions correctly will receive a Lincoln Library free. In case of a tie it was expressed that neatness will decide the winner.

The alumni of the high school is going to give a dance in the auditorium on the evening of December 27th.

The senior play will take place Friday night; and every one is looking forward to a great piece of work by the cast.

The band at Bensalem is coming along in fine shape under the teaching of Professor Valeno, of Doylestown. The members of this organization have received new books, and are practicing very diligently.

Soviet Foe Gets Ten Years' Imprisonment

Professor Leonid C. Ramzin, leader of the "Prom," or Industrial Party, which fomented the revolt against Communism, with four of his aides, received a sentence of ten years' imprisonment from the four judges who sat in the trial. At first Ramzin and the other four were given death sentences. Three other men, found guilty of treason, were sentenced to eight years.

Spend Wisely and Aid Unemployed

Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, chief of the women's division of President Hoover's Emergency Employment Committee, has enumerated six practical and simple ways in which women can help solve the unemployment problem. Among other things she tells women to "spruce up" themselves, their families and their homes, but to spend wisely.

BOXING SHUFFLES OUT OF '30 GROGGY; STILL ON FEET

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Boxing will shuffle out when the 1931 gong clangs in pretty good shape, after having been reeling and groggy at times during the year 1930 when the business depression and an epidemic of fouls almost floored the game for a "long count."

The highlight of the year, of course, was the crowning of a new heavyweight champion of the world—Max Schmeling of Germany. This event occurred in New York on the night of June 12 last. The title, left vacant upon the retirement of James J. ("Gene") Tunney, was won by the young German in a rather unsatisfactory manner. Jack Sharkey of Boston, the American champion at the time, was Schmeling's opponent. For three rounds Sharkey administered an artistic lacing to the German but in the fourth the Boston ex-sailor let go a low left hook that struck Schmeling in foul territory and Herr Max automatically became the new champion.

Schmeling, however, has failed to live up to his promise to be a "fighting champion" and this fact has done the game no good. In truth the heavyweight situation has been in the doldrums ever since, and there is little likelihood that Max will defend his crown before next summer. He is making financial hay while the sun shines, his plans including the making of motion pictures at Hollywood, Cal., early in 1931, followed by an exhibition tour of the United States. Schmeling's recent months have been spent abroad, taking things easy.

Indications are that when Schmeling does defend his title his opponent will be one of three men—W. L. ("Young") Stribling of Georgia, Sharkey or Primo Carnera, the giant Italian. Stribling has come to the front again as a result of his sensational knock-outs of Otto Von Porat and Fighting Phil Scott of Great Britain. There is at present talk of a fight in Florida next February between Stribling and Carnera for the right to meet Schmeling. Sharkey has been forced to take a back seat since the unsatisfactory ending of his bout with Schmeling but Jack is too good a fighter not to be heard from later. Stribling lost a little ground after his corking victories over Von Porat and Scott by failing to put Arthur De Run away but, even so, the Southerner's rating is high. Carnera did not help his cause any by losing a decision to Jimmy Maloney, of Boston.

The rest of the heavyweights are virtually out of the picture as far as a crack at Schmeling's crown is concerned. George Godfrey, the big Negro is apparently going nowhere; the lion-hearted "spoiler," Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, is showing signs of wear and tear and Paulino Uzcudun, the Spaniard has slipped. Maloney has seen his best days and certainly cannot be figured as a potential champion.

Tony Canzoneri, the new lightweight champion of the world, provided the real upset of the year when he won the title recently in Madison Square Garden, New York, by knocking out Al Singer in the first round. Singer, incidentally, won and lost his title in less than a round. He won it from Sammy Mandell by a "K. O." in the first round in one of the most discussed bouts of 1930. Mandell's reversal of form was a stunning surprise to his admirers.

The lightweight division has a wealth of first class material—such fine scrappers as Jack Kid Berg, Billy Pertolle, Singer, Justo Suarez, Kid Kaplan, Sammy Dorfman, Tony Herrera, Lew Paluso and Ray Miller. With Schmeling holding the heavyweight crown—a "synthetic" champion, some experts allege—and Canzoneri a "fighting champ" if there ever was one, at the top of the lightweight division, the other title holders are as follows:

Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion; Mickey Walker, middleweight champion; Tommy Freeman, welterweight champion; Jack Kid Berg, junior welterweight champion; Benny Bass, junior lightweight champion and Battling Battalino, featherweight champion. The bantamweight and flyweight titles are vacant.

The various divisions boast a sprinkling of good scrappers. In the light heavyweight divisions there are Larry Johnson, Jimmy Slattery, George Courtney and Pete Latzo; in the middleweight class Dave Shade, Len Harvey, Rene DeVos, Harry Ebers, Gorillo Jones, and Vince Dundee; among the welterweights there are Jimmy McLarnin, Young Corbett, Jackie Fields, Young Jack Thompson and Baby Joe Gans; in the junior welterweight class we have Manuel Quintero, Billy Townsend, Sammy Mandell, King Tut, Stanislaus Loayza and Joe Gillick; in the junior lightweight, Al Foreman, Pete Nebo, Roger Bernard, Mike Dundee and Jimmy Slavin; in the featherweight class Kid Chocolate, Earl Mastro, Fidel LaBarba, Bud Taylor, Eddie Shez and Bushy Graham; among the bantams Al Brown, Kid Francis, Newsboy Brown, Joe Scalfaro and Archie Bell, and in the flyweight class Midget Wolgast, Frankie Genaro, Willie Davies and Frank Anselm.

Boxing crowds are coming back to the various arenas again after having turned their backs on fights for awhile. The business depression and the run of foul fights was too much for many fans. However, in recent weeks there has been a financial comeback because matchmakers have finally learned that if they put on good shows the public will respond. This was shown recently by the good attendance at stirring battles in the Garden in New York between Kid Chocolate and Kid Berg; Singer vs. Mandell; Berg vs. Petrolle; Petrolle vs. McLarnin and the Singer-Canzoneri fight for the lightweight championship of the world.

Ter Judge Calvin S. Boyer had directed a verdict of not guilty. The costs were placed on the county. Reinhard was arrested following an automobile accident on the road between Milford Square and Quakertown in which James H. West was fatally injured. The Commonwealth failed to prove that the defendant had shown any gross negligence or was directly responsible for the accident. A jury yesterday acquitted Reinbold Meyers, of Trevose, charged with aggravated assault and battery, assault and battery with intent to kill, and assault and battery, and divided the costs between the defendant and the prosecutor, Andrew Phillips, of Trevose.

The case was tried before Judge Keller. Meyers was arrested by State Police after he and Phillips engaged in a fist encounter at the Phillips home during a drunken party. In the altercation Phillips received a gash across the left cheek with a knife and was blamed the cutting on Meyers.

Charged with surety, Patrick McGowan, operator of a hotel in Point Pleasant, was before Judge Keller yesterday afternoon on a charge lodged by Robert Scalza, of Trenton, N. J. Judge Keller made no order but directed that the costs in the case be paid on a 50-50 basis by the defendant and the prosecutor, Scalza.

Scalza accused McGowan of threatening to shoot him while in a fit of temper on June 29 this year following an argument between the two families. The Scalzas were staying at the McGowan hotel preparatory to taking it over for the summer months during Mrs. McGowan's illness.

In defense, McGowan denied that he ever pointed a revolver at Scalza or his wife. He said the whole trouble started when it was found that Scalza had brought some beer and apple whiskey to the hotel to sell after he took charge of the place for the summer. McGowan said he would not allow Scalza to sell any liquor and that Scalza then refused to sign a lease. McGowan was not arrested until two months later when Scalza brought charges against him.

"I'll make no order against you, McGowan, but direct that you and Scalza divide the costs," Judge Keller told them.

Fred W. Shaub of Philadelphia was acquitted yesterday of driving an automobile while drunk on the Easton highway north of Doylestown and the jury placed the costs on the county. Shaub, a shell-shocked and gassed World War veteran, was arrested and taken before a Doylestown doctor who pronounced him drunk. Shaub denied that he had been drinking but explained that he had been nervous as a result of a head injury that happened just before his car ran into another car.

J. J. James Brophy, of Jenkintown, charged on two counts with involuntary manslaughter and one count of driving while drunk, was acquitted yesterday of the manslaughter charges and convicted of drunken driving. His attorney applied for a new trial. Brophy was driving a car on the Old York Road near New Hope two months ago when the machine crashed and two men were fatally injured.

Some cough syrups are too mild...they toy with the cough...Other cough preparations are often "doped" with chloroform, cannabis, or opiates.

Charles Simon, Jr., of Philadelphia, charged with assault and battery by automobile on the Lincoln Highway, was acquitted yesterday by a jury that directed the costs to be paid by the defendant.

Hyman Bena, of Philadelphia, charged with manufacturing and possessing liquor on a farm in Lower Makefield township when it was raided by State Police recently, was convicted by a jury. Judge Keller sentenced him to pay a fine of $200 and costs and suspended a prison sentence of two months.

Bena, who was a dupe for the high-ups in the whiskey making plant, was found on the premises when it was raided.

In the case of Harry E. Taylor, of Holland, charged with fraudulent conversion of property, assault and battery with intent to ravish, assault and battery, a verdict of not guilty was returned, but costs divided between the defendant and the prosecutrix, Catherine I. Beer.

Convalescent Home Appeals for Funds

bring to your remembrance the sick and unprivileged children that are in need of nourishment and medical attention so they may be saved from deformities and mental deficiency, a direct result of malnutrition, commonly called rickets. Twenty-six babies were treated at the Home this year, and placed on the road to health and strength.

"Kind friends have donated the paper, printing and multigraphing of these letter heads. We are sending out two thousand letters. If each person receiving a letter will send one dollar for the babies there will be two thousand dollars in the treasury for the important work.

"The Lord Jesus Christ said: 'Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven that one of these little ones should perish.' Remember, the Christ Child, and in His name give one dollar for the babies.

"Thanking you for past favors, and assuring you that the committee in charge appreciates your co-operation in caring for the help-less sick babies.

Paul Baer, of Fort Wayne, Ind., well-known pilot, with a woman passenger, was killed when their plane crashed on the Whangpo River, near Shanghai, China. Five other passengers were seriously injured in the wreck. This was said to be the first crack-up of an air-mail plane in China. Baer was a ranking American ace during the World War.
